Headline:
Further showers for many.

Today:
Rain clearing northwards across Scotland, though persisting in the far north and northeast with low cloud. Sunny spells and showers elsewhere, some heavy and slow-moving. More persistent rain reaching southern England later.

Tonight:
Showers mostly dying out. Rain across parts of southern England, heavy in places, moving north into east Wales. Patchy light rain and drizzle affecting northern Scotland.

Thursday:
Rain across southern England and Wales turning more showery. Another day of sunny spells and showers for most, some heavy. Cool and cloudy in the northeast.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Remaining unsettled with showers which will often be heavy and at times thundery. Perhaps fewer showers across Scotland where cloudier with some light rain.
